_____ Check out my Youtube channel here: from Withania somnifera roots and their in vitro cytotoxic evaluation. Withania somnifera roots have been used as a folk medicine for ages and have been shown to have immunomodulatory, anti-cancer and antioxidant properties. We have previously demonstrated that 3-angeloyloxy-withanolide E, the active in the cytotoxic evaluation of the acetone root extract of W. somnifera was identified in the roots of this plant. In this study we have confirmed the structure of 3-angeloyloxy-withanolide E (1) and identified additional compounds, withanolides A-C (2-4) and withaferin A (6) from the acetone extract of W. somnifera roots. Their chemical structures were elucidated by extensive NMR, mass and IR spectroscopic analysis. Despite the absence of the 3-OH group in the withanolide structures, the structures of the main compounds identified in the acetone extract (1-6) were also evaluated. All the isolated compounds were evaluated for their cytotoxic properties against the human cancer cell lines MCF7 and HeLa. Compounds 1 and 3 exhibited cytotoxicity against MCF7 cells with an EC50 of 1.0 and 0.6 µg/ml and compounds 3 and 4 were active against HeLa cells with an EC50 of 3.0 and 2.0 µg/ml, respectively. [Results of rehabilitative treatment in acute pain syndrome]. The results of treatment of 74 patients with acute pain syndrome caused by injury of the musculoskeletal system are analyzed. We used the algometric method as a parameter of the pain intensity and the ROM of joints in the patients. This method has been developed and validated for the cases of acute musculoskeletal pain. The advantages of the algometric method in relation to the classic methods of pain assessment have been proved. The use of a device for pain rating facilitates and improves the patients' performance during the rehabilitative treatment. According to the obtained results, it is possible to specify the tactics of management of rehabilitation treatment and achieve the purpose.
